FELDMAN RENOVATION

The owners of this mid-century modern home, designed originally by local architect James Stageberg, wanted their home to better fit their functional needs and lifestyle. The principal changes were to the public and private areas of the main level. What had been two bedrooms and a small, shared bath were redesigned to create a couple's suite with a larger bath and walk-in closet. The existing kitchen and dining areas were opened up to one another and the adjacent living area. Secondary changes occurred on the lower level, including a bath remodel and redesigned family/entertainment rooms.
