GAUTHIER RESIDENCE

As our clients search for places to build their homes, they often are forced to consider fringe suburban or remote lots. This home is designed to meet the demands of contemporary family living, yet it is set in an established inner-city neighborhood that has all the urban amenities that appeal to many people. Special consideration was given to keeping the house smaller, locating it carefully on the lot and adhering to the established tradition of having a detached garage. All these design considerations help the house blend in while not fading away.
